Free home energy survey, work available

By Val Van Meter
 The Winchester Star

Berryville — Affordable housing development is the main mission of Community Housing Partners, said Melissa Byrd, public relations coordinator.

But the 33-year-old nonprofit organization has several other irons in the fire. One of them is energy services.

Low income or handicapped people, who meet the guidelines, can have CHP do an energy survey of their homes and then have weatherization or repair work done, free of charge.

This includes an energy and safety survey, Byrd said.

The work is funded through state and federal grants from the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development and private donations.

A separate branch of CHP can provide the same service for paying customers, Byrd said, and the organization also offers training to other agencies that want to do weatherization work.

For more information, contact Dave Bourdon at 540-381-9446.
